

IIMUN — Season I

Delegate Procedure Guide

Welcome to IIMUN — Impact International Model United Nations, Season I.

This guide explains how committee will proceed, what delegates should expect, and how you will participate throughout the conference.

Our Season I topic is:

Regulating AI in Healthcare & Medical Diagnostics

The goal of committee WHO is to research, debate, negotiate, collaborate, and develop practical solutions to the issue while representing the interests and position of your assigned country.

- The General Speakers List (GSL) is the main speaking queue of the committee. Delegates use it to present their country's position, discuss the topic, and propose solutions.

1. Committee Opening

Roll Call

The Chair will call each delegation. Like so Delegate of France

When your country is called, respond with either:

“Present” or “Present and Voting”

When you answer present you have the choice for voting against or in favor of or you may abstain.

When you answer present and voting you have the choice of voting in favor of or against no right to abstain.

The difference is those present and voting will be given priority for delegate awards.

Opening Speeches

Each delegation will deliver a short opening speech. This is your chance to speak about the topic in general without a defined scope.

Your speech should introduce:

- Your country's position on the topic
- Major concerns your country has
- Important priorities
- Possible solutions

Keep your speech within the speaking time established by the Chair in this case 60 seconds.

2. Motions

After the opening stage, delegates may propose motions to determine what the committee should discuss next.

A motion should clearly state:

- What type of discussion you are requesting. (Moderated Caucuses or Unmoderated Caucuses)
- The total duration
- Speaking time

The specific sub-subject to be discussed under the S1 topic of Regulating AI in Healthcare & Medical Diagnostics

Example

“The delegation of Japan motions for a 10-minute moderated caucus, with 60-second speaking time, to discuss patient data privacy in AI healthcare.”

The Chair will manage the motions according to the committee's procedural rules which is majority vote for IIMUN.

3. Moderated Caucuses

During a moderated caucus, delegates remain in formal session.

The Chair will recognize delegates individually using the GSL and will call you by saying Delegate of France you have been recognized, and each recognized delegate will have the designated speaking time there will be timer on screen don't worry.

The discussion will focus on the specific subject stated in the motion.

Possible subtopics include (must be within the scope):

- Patient data privacy
- AI bias and discrimination
- Safety and reliability
- Human oversight
- Accountability

- Accessibility
- Regulation of medical diagnostic systems

Remember: these subtopics are parts of the overall topic. Your ultimate goal is to develop solutions addressing the broader issue of regulating AI in healthcare and medical diagnostics.

And when you have you have been recognized by the chair you may speak

Yielding Speaking Time

When a delegate finishes their speech before their allotted time expires, they must yield the remaining time. A delegate may yield their remaining time in one of three ways:

1. Yield to the Chair

The remaining time is returned to the Chair, who may then recognize the next delegation on the GSL.

“The delegate of country yields the remainder of its time to the Chair.”

2. Yield to Another Delegate

The delegate may give their remaining time to another delegation, such as a delegation within the same bloc. The recognized delegate may use the remaining time to speak.

“The delegate of country yields the remainder of its time to the delegate of Germany.”

3. Yield to Points of Information

The delegate may yield their remaining time to Points of Information, allowing other delegates to ask questions during the remaining time.

“The delegate yields the remainder of its time to Points of Information.”

The Chair then manages the questions and answers according to the conference rules.

Important: A delegate cannot use more time than was originally available to them. If they finish early, only the remaining time can be yielded.

4. Motions After a Caucus

When a moderated caucus ends, the Chair may ask:

“Are there any points (discussed later in the pdf) or motions on the floor?”

Delegates may then propose another moderated caucus, an unmoderated caucus.

The committee may move through several moderated caucuses before delegates are ready to negotiate solutions.

5. Motion for an Unmoderated Caucus

When delegates believe they have discussed enough of the issue and are ready to negotiate, a delegate may propose an unmoderated caucus.

Example

“The delegation of Germany motions for a 15-minute unmoderated caucus.”

If the motion is adopted by majority vote, the committee enters an unmoderated caucus.

6. Unmoderated Caucus & Bloc Formation

During an unmoderated caucus, the formal speaking structure is temporarily suspended.

Delegates may freely communicate with one another.

You may:

- Find countries with similar positions
- Form blocs
- Negotiate
- Combine proposals
- Develop solutions
- Begin preparing a working paper

Your bloc does not necessarily need to consist of countries that agree on everything. The purpose of negotiation is to find common ground. When the countries has decided on a bloc kindly message me (The Founder of IIMUN) I will create a separate group for you to discuss)

7. Working Papers

Once a bloc has developed its ideas, it may prepare a working paper.

A working paper is a document containing the bloc's proposed solutions to the overall topic.

For example, a working paper might propose:

- International standards for medical AI
- Stronger patient-data protections
- Human oversight of high-risk AI systems

A working paper is a collection of proposals and does not yet represent the final formal resolution this working paper may be subjected to enquiry and debate. If more than one 1 bloc has been formed we will open a vote on the floor for which working paper to oversee first. So have a short summary ready (asked by IIMUN)

8. Working Paper Discussion

Once the working paper has been submitted to the chair and shared with the whole committee, the Chair will open a moderated caucus using the GSL specifically to discuss the working paper.

Delegates may:

- Support proposals
- Raise concerns
- Identify weaknesses
- Ask questions
- Suggest improvements
- Propose alternative approaches

Example

A delegate might say:

“The delegation of France supports the proposed international safety standards but recommends including technical assistance for countries that lack the resources to implement them.”

This stage allows the committee to examine the bloc's proposals before they are finalized.

9. Revision & Negotiation

After the working paper discussion, the bloc will decide which suggestions it wants to incorporate.

The bloc may:

- Add proposals
- Remove proposals
- Modify proposals
- Combine ideas
- Leave certain proposals unchanged

The final decision on how the working paper is revised belongs to the bloc.

10. Draft Resolution

Once the bloc has finalized its proposed solutions, it will convert the working paper into a formal draft resolution.

The draft resolution should present clear and practical actions addressing:

Regulating AI in Healthcare & Medical Diagnostics

The Chair will provide the required format and submission instructions I will send it later guys separately.

11. Draft Resolution Debate

Once the draft resolution is ready, it will be shared with the committee.

The Chair will open the GSL for debate on the draft resolution.

Delegates may:

- Support the resolution
- Raise concerns
- Explain their country's position
- Identify potential problems
- Suggest changes

Delegates should continue to represent their assigned country's interests throughout the debate.

12. Amendments

Amendments are permitted under the committee's rules but with a time limit, delegates may propose changes to specific parts of the draft resolution.

An amendment could:

- Add a clause
 - Remove a clause
 - Change wording
 - Modify a proposed action

13. Final Voting

Once the debate has concluded over the draft resolution, the Chair will close the discussion and move the committee into voting procedure.

The Chair will explain the available voting options (In favor of, In against of, and for present delegates they may abstain).

Delegates will then vote on the final draft resolution.

If the majority is reached, the draft resolution passes.

If it does not receive the majority, it fails.

14. Committee Closing

Once the all the objectives of the committee is complete, the Chair will officially close the committee.

The conference will then proceed to the IIMUN Closing Ceremony, where awards and certificates will be presented.

Procedure Important Notes

Points

Points are requests made by delegates to the Chair. They are not speeches or debates and should be kept brief.

1. Point of Personal Privilege

Use this when something is affecting your ability to participate comfortably or hear/follow the committee.

Examples:

“Point of Personal Privilege: The delegation cannot hear the speaker clearly.”

“Point of Personal Privilege: Could the Chair please repeat the last statement?”

This can also be used for reasonable technical issues during an online conference.

Remember: This is not used to challenge another delegate's argument.

2. Point of Parliamentary Inquiry

Use this when you have a question about the procedure or rules of the committee.

Examples:

“Point of Parliamentary Inquiry: Could the Chair clarify whether we are currently accepting motions?”

“Point of Parliamentary Inquiry: What is the procedure for submitting a working paper?”

This is about how the MUN works, not about the topic being debated.

3. Point of Information

These are questions directed toward a speaker about their speech or position only during your speaking time and then you may allocate your time to that delegate.

Example: “Point of Information to the delegation of Japan: How would your proposal protect patient data?”

4. Point of Order

Use this when you believe there has been a procedural error or that the committee is not following its established rules.

Example:

“Point of Order: The delegation believes the current procedure does not follow the rules previously established by the Chair.”

This should not be used simply because you disagree with another delegate and you to explain.

Points vs. Motions

These are different.

A POINT: is generally used to ask the Chair something or raise a procedural/personal issue.

A MOTION: is used to propose what the committee should do next.

For example:

Point: “Point of Parliamentary Inquiry: When will working papers be submitted?”

Motion: “Motion for a 10-minute moderated caucus with 60-second speaking time on patient data privacy.”

Important Point Rules

- Keep points brief.
- Wait until the Chair allows points.
- Do not use points to interrupt another delegate's speech unless the Chair's rules specifically allow it which is not allowed.
- Do not use a Point of Personal Privilege as an excuse to attack another delegate.
- Do not use a Point of Order simply because you disagree with the Chair.
- If you are unsure whether something is a point or a motion, ask the Chair for clarification.

Quick Reference

Point	Purpose
Personal Privilege	Something is preventing you from participating properly
Point of Parliamentary Inquiry	Question about MUN procedure
Point of Information	Question about a speaker's argument/position
Point of Order	Possible procedural violation

Tip for new delegates: If you are unsure, don't panic. The Chair aka me is there to guide you through the procedure.

Delegate Reminders

- Represent your assigned country, not your personal opinion.
- Research your country's position before the conference.
- Participate actively in speeches and caucuses.
- Use diplomacy (be mature) when disagreeing with other delegates.
- Negotiate rather than simply arguing.
- Listen to other delegations and look for common ground to form blocs.
- Follow the Chair's procedural instructions.
- Stay within the designated speaking time.
- Keep discussions focused on the committee's topic.
- Remember that the goal is not simply to speak the most—it is to work toward a viable solution.
